

PCORI Public Access Policy: Payment of Journal Public Access Fees

In an effort to ensure that the results of our funded research are available widely and without delay, PCORI is offering to pay fees that journals charge (up to $3,500 per project) to provide public access to published articles. This will allow the public to view your article immediately upon publication, free of charge.

Providing public access to peer-reviewed, published findings is a critical first step in the dissemination of your research findings. The fees PCORI will cover include publication charges, article processing charges, and similar fees charged both by open access journals and by many traditional journals for providing access to specific articles.

To find out more and to see if your manuscript will qualify for this benefit, see PCORI's Awardee Resources page including instructions for payment requests. You can also email PublicAccess@pcori.org if you have additional questions.